although the exact combination of factors that will lead to stretch marks is unknown, they are thought to be genetic in the first stage, the primary infection is often active, and the brain infection is a cerebritis - an inflammatory response with some tissue breakdown