A computer program allows the state to determine not only how much of its Medicaid budget goes to the drug, but also which patients are receiving it.